PRESERVATION OF FORESTS.

The Atlantic Coast Lumber Company, which has been operating for several years near Georgetown, is about to be merged with the Export Lumber Company, and a new corporation is to be formed with increased facilities for lumbering and with the purpose of applying them in various parts of the South. Recently it was reported that another large lumber concern was to undertake the wholesale cutting of timber in the forests of this State. This is all gratifying in a way but it also warns us that we must take some steps to require moderation in the cutting of the forest trees of South Carolina. Scientific forestry can be made to yield a steady and inexhaustible lumber supply without impairing the value of the forests, but few lumber companies employ scientific forestry. The General Assembly of the State should take some consideration of this matter which is of vast and far reaching importance.—Charlotte Post.

There is no doubt that we have been entirely too wasteful with our forests. In many places the forests are cut and burned without being put to any use whatever. It is a subject as the Post suggests of far reaching importance and the people should be reminded constantly of it. In traveling on one of our railroads recently we were reminded of the wastefulness in the matter of our forests by the timber that was deadened and left to rot. If it cannot be prevented in any other way there should be some legislation on the subject.

Knowledge is power, but it is power merely because it enables us to do something, and to do something enables us to be something, and to be something is what constitutes character, and this last is the only thing which we can take into the world to come. Education is not reading and writing alone; it is reading and writing, but it is something more, something better, something higher. We read and write not as an end, but as a means. If we take what we know to be the end, we shall never do anything. All that there is in the books, calculus, poetry, astronomy, science, whatever things may be taught to us are valuable only because they enable us to do something worth being done and to become something worth being.—Governor Charles B. Aycock.

The above is true and we want every white child in South Carolina given the opportunity to do something and to be something. Education draws out and awakens the dormant faculties and gives the mind aspirations and when properly directed aspirations to do high and noble things. Let us give every child the opportunity to strive to attain high ideals. Many times the parents are careless or indifferent. That is the reason we favor compulsory education. The State forces us to pay tax for the education of the children because that education better fits them for the high and responsible duty of citizenship and if that be true as it is then the State has a right to say to the parent you give your child the advantage of this education which is furnished. It will hurt no one but will help thousands of children.

Educational progress means religious good; it indicates a love of truth that is not to be limited. The hope of the state is not in the cities or the big towns. The hope of the greatest future is dawning in the rural districts.—J. B. Carlyle.

And it is dawning because of the school houses that dot our hills throughout the rural districts and the schools that are taught in them. It is the vigor and the manliness which comes from the rural districts which help to make our towns and cities and we want to see these children in the rural districts given an education such as the State is able to provide so that their tastes for learning may be awakened and once awakened they will continue to satisfy the thirst.

Attorney General Gunter it is said has offered the position of assistant attorney general to Mr. W. H. Townsend, of Barnwell, the present code commissioner and Mr. Townsend will accept. This is a good selection. Mr. Townsend is a young man but a close student and a hard worker and is recognized as one among the ablest of the young members of the bar in this State. His work as code commissioner was thoroughly and carefully done and he will be a safe counsellor as assistant attorney general.

We are informed that Hon. Fred H. Dominick will be a candidate for Code Commissioner to succeed the Hon. W. H. Townsend who has been appointed assistant attorney general. Mr. Dominick is a young lawyer of ability and has had experience in the Legislature and would fill the office acceptably. He has many friends in the Legislature and should be entered the race would be a formidable competitor for any other aspirant.

Governor Terrell, of Georgia, has just signed an order by which he has made one hundred Georgia Colonels. They are members of his personal staff. Several members of Gov. Candler's staff hold over and will be part of the new staff. It is stated that at one time Gov. Stephens of Georgia had three hundred colonels on his personal staff.

Elections will be held this year for members of congress and not being a presidential election there is not a great deal of interest manifested. It is possible for the next House of Representatives to be Democratic but hardly probable.

Let every Democratic vote remember his duty as a Democrat today and go to the polls and cast his ballot for the nominees of the party.

The State Fair was a success so far as the crowd was concerned but the exhibits grow less each year. The attraction on the streets this year far exceeded the attractions at the Fair grounds. This should not be. Those who manage the Fair should arouse more interest in the matter of securing exhibits.

GENERAL ELECTION TODAY.

The Nominees of the Democratic Party Oppositon for Congress in this District.

The general election for State and Federal officers will be held today. For State officers there is only one ticket, that nominated by the Democrats in the recent primary.

The Democratic nominees for Congress in a majority of the congressional districts of the State have Republican opposition. What this opposition means is not easily to be seen. However, the movement began in all parts of the State at about the same time, and there is no doubt it has a purpose.

This opposition alone, if there were no other reason, should be the cause of a full Democratic vote being polled today. In this, the Third Congressional District, with about 16,000 Democratic votes and only about 1,500 Republican votes at most, Hon. Wyatt Aiken, of Abbeville, the Democratic nominee, is opposed by John Scott, Republican, of Newberry.

As stated, the Democratic State ticket has no opposition. It is as follows:

STATE TICKET.

For governor—D. C. Heyward, of Colleton.

For lieutenant governor—Jno. T. Sloan, of Richland.

For secretary of State—J. T. Gantt, of Richland.

For attorney general—U. X. Gunter, Jr., of Spartanburg.

For State treasurer—R. H. Jennings, of Fairfield.

For comptroller general—A. W. Jones, of Abbeville.

For adjutant general—Jno. D. Frost, of Richland.

For State superintendent of education—O. B. Martin, of Greenville.

For railroad commissioner—B. L. Caughman, of Saluda.

COUNTY TICKET.

Following are the nominees of the Democratic party for county offices in Newberry:

House of representatives—Arthur Kibler, E. H. Aull, Jno. F. Banks; judge of probate, Jno. C. Wilson; county supervisor, Jno. M. Schumpert; county superintendent of education, Eugene S. Werts.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The question of amending Section 11 of Article 7 of the State Constitution, relating to counties and county government, is to be voted upon. The amendment is for the purpose of destroying the corporate existence of certain townships in Greenwood, Greenville, Laurens and Saluda. These townships some years ago issued bonds in support of a railroad which was never built, and are now seeking to have their corporate existence destroyed in order to keep from paying their valid debt.

A number of our people attended the State Fair and report a nice time but a poor Fair.

Married, on last Wednesday at the bride's parents by the Rev. Schaffer Miss Ola Stockman and Mr. Ira Sheppard. We wish the young couple much happiness and joy through this life.

Messrs. J. Willie and Irwin Long are now sawing lumber on Mr. I. J. Lowman's place near O'Neill's.

There was preaching Sunday at Zion by the pastor, Rev. Schaffer.

Mr. John S. Dominick, of near Simpson's ferry is building himself a nice residence.

We attended the State Fair and took in the sights and wonders. The Fair according to our judgment was very poor, but it was a pleasure to be in the capital city and meet many of our old friends from different sections of the State, and especially more so those who had gone there from this county, viz.: Messrs. A. H. Kohn, Feagle and Gordon, of the F. M. Co. store; Mr. S. Broadus Dominick, who is at present fireman on the fast mail and Pullman sleeping train between Columbia and Salisbury, N. C. Also Messrs. Ernest and Jim Luther, who are merchants there. Leona.

DR. CROMER ON LUTHER.

An Address Before the Young People and Congregation of Ebenezer Lutheran Church in Columbia.

Dr. Geo. B. Cromer on Sunday delivered an address before the young people and congregation of Ebenezer Lutheran church in Columbia. Speaking of this address, The State of yesterday says:

Dr. Cromer talked of Martin Luther, and the address was not only a literary and historical treat, but it was calculated to inspire the young men of the church who are preparing to organize themselves into a society.

Dr. Cromer's address was analytical as well as eulogistic. He stated that the great man must come at the opportune time and the time is opportune when the world demands it.

Luther was a contemporary of Columbus and his explorations, of Gutenberg and his creation of the art of printing, and of the invention of gunpowder, the great leveller of classes which put the humbler man on the same footing with the chevalier.

At that time the horizon of the human mind was being broadened and the world was ready for the work of Luther.

He pictured Luther the quiet but determined monk in his work of translating the Testaments into German, spending weeks on single passages in order that no one might be misled. His translations are said to have established the literature of the present German empire.

Luther was ordered to Worms there to answer to the pope, the greatest ecclesiastical power in the world, and to the king of the greatest nation. He acknowledged that he wrote the works which bore his name on the title page, and declined to recant when given the opportunity.

Luther was all the time a monk. His purpose was not to destroy, but to reform. He did not care to establish a new church, he was loyal to Catholicism, but sought to reform and to root out evil and error. He sought to tear away the human frailties built up around the true gospel. He had up to this time believed Rome to be a holy city, but he found it to be corrupt. It was not until he was expelled from the church of Rome that he foreswore his allegiance to that church.

Then followed a character delineation. Dr. Cromer declared that Luther to be courageous must have had faith, and faith is worth little without knowledge. One of the uses of heroes is to furnish examples for future generations. We do not think of the great centres of commerce which have passed into history, but we remember the lives of their great men.

Luther's life was one of integrity and love of truth. Dr. Cromer declared that his heart was made glad a few months ago by the great outpouring of people to do honor to the memory of a great man. The life of Wade Hampton will be remembered as a noble example. It is said of him that Hampton in his youth learned "to ride, to shoot and to tell the truth, Hampton always loved the truth. "We need a truth loving and a truth telling people," said Dr. Cromer.

Then we come to the gentler, the more sentimental side of Luther's nature. He was fond of music. It is told of him that once after having vanquished in debate one of the proudest monarchs in Europe he went direct to his home to enjoy the pleasures of romping with his children.

Dr. Cromer echoed Carlyle's statement that Luther's work of reformation had been the beginning of a new era in the world. What can one man do? What did this one monk do? This man of the people? The answer is found in the lives of the French Huguenots, in Christian America, in Holland, in England and in the German empire.

In conclusion Dr. Cromer summed up the characteristics of Luther, elements of simplicity in a combination of greatness.
